

SIEMENS

Can your automation partner take your company into the next century?

As the 20th century rushes to a close, your company's automation systems may determine where you'll be in the next. If your automation partner isn't already at work on 21st century solutions, you could be left behind. Which is but one more reason to take a look at Siemens.

We're the world's automation technology leader. With a worldwide automation group of 20,000 people. Annual sales of nearly $4 billion. And $400 million invested in automation research and development last year alone.

That means we put 10% of Siemens automation sales into finding solutions for the next century.

Which is one reason our product line of PLCs, CNCs, industrial computers and process control systems is one of the most comprehensive in the world. But since we know a lot of other products may have to talk with ours, we're committed to an open architecture. Our SINEC-network products comply with international networking standards such as Ethernet, MAP, MMS and Fieldbus.

As Siemens Industrial Automation, we want to bring the benefits of our products and experience to you, our customer. Our sales offices and service network are where you need them, across the U.S. and in 120 countries around the world. With Siemens, you won't just enter the next century—you'll conquer it.
